An invention that Transform the World

If I were a scientist, I would make an Animal Language Machine to transform the world.

The Animal Language Machine helps people to understand what the animals are saying and helps animals understand what we are saying. For example, if your pet is sick, it could tell you immediately. Or if you need help from your pet, you could tell them to help too! It would be more convenient to help each other if the world has an Animal Language Machine. But maybe some bad people would use the machine to tell the animals to do bad things and trick the animals. For example, a robber might tell a mouse to steal money from a bank. So I must make a protection machine to prevent the bad guys from doing bad things.

If this machine were real, people and animals could live more peacefully together. Animals will not be killed by humans anymore.
